1 Chairman's Statement

This year saw the continued good work of the second full year of activity for the NSAI Electrotechnical Committee (ETC). We are grateful to our many experts who give their time and technical expertise to our technical committees. Our activities include a wide range of sectors including electrical installations, household products, internet devices, mobile phones, energy systems and cars.

An important part of our work in 2020 was to develop the new edition of the national wiring rules I.S. 10101. TC2 put in intense effort to develop the new rules which are ever changing because of the introduction of new technologies including electrification of the automotive industry and energy efficiency. The new National Wiring Rules were open for consultation during 2020. It is the first major revision to the standard in over a decade. Important changes have been made in areas like electrical installation, safety and energy efficiency. The draft revisions will improve safeguards and bring industry requirements in line with technical developments and best practice in Europe.

All the NSAI ETC Technical Committees continue to monitor and develop standards in areas as diverse as electrical safety, smart grids, energy efficiency, explosive atmospheres, environmental issues, electromagnetic compatibility and human health. Many of these areas are essential to support European Directives.

The speed of innovation has accelerated to the point where no company can do everything alone anymore; collaboration has become more important than ever. The ETC technical committees are heavily involved in new technology areas such as energy efficiency, smart grids, Internet of Things, environmental standardisation for electronic components and 5G.

The theme for the IEC general meeting in 2020 was "Better Quality Better Lives". In the new wave of industrial revolution, the role of standards and conformity assessment as quality infrastructure for economic and social development was addressed. Standards are the facilitator of innovation and environmentally sustainable growth. The impact of its standardisation addresses many global challenges, such as universal energy access, sustainable urbanization and energy efficiency.

In the future broad societal challenges will require integrated technology solutions. The work of the ETC actively reaches out too many technology sectors, to optimize outcomes, and reduce waste and cost for stakeholders.

2 Introduction

NSAI has established the consultative Electro Technical Committee (ETC) to advise NSAI on technical and policy matters concerning Ireland's membership of the International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC) and European Committee for Electrotechnical Standardization (CENELEC), the formulation of Irish Standards and the establishment and maintenance of the infrastructure of NSAI national mirror Technical Committee. The membership of the ETC is composed of key stakeholders/collective bodies that provide an authoritative and representative voice or policy role in the electrical sector.

The industry currently has 361 number of experts involved in international work.

3 Scope of TC

The NSAI ETC extends to all areas of electro-technology covered by the IEC and CENELEC, and to the extent from time to time agreed with NSAI, certain areas of the work of the European Telecommunications Standards Institute (ETSI), the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) and the European Committee for Standardization (CEN) or other relevant standards organisations.

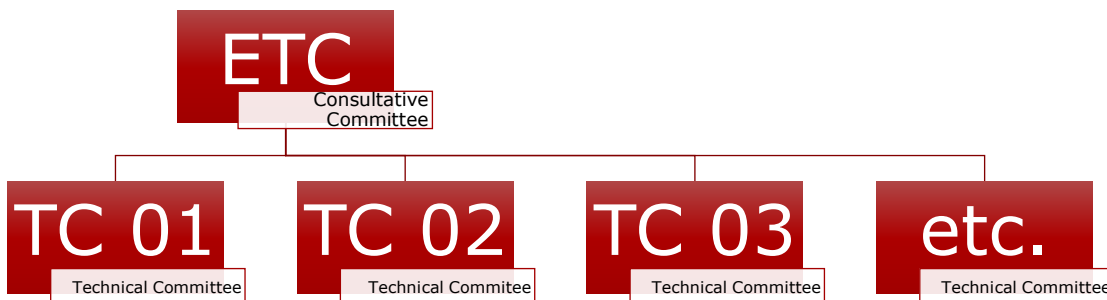

The committee does not mirror international committees; Its function is to provide oversight to the following technical committees:
